

ABSTRACT

An apparatus and method for controlling the data rate of a stream of data between an application processes and a network, having a flow control module coupled to the applications that 5 controls a first data rate of the stream of data. A transport layer provider is coupled to the control module for receiving the stream of data and modifying the first rate of the stream of data in response to a signal from the flow control module.

*add
B' }*

00430-000/000

10